8 June 1356, 4 [John Thoresby]

Letters of John [Thoresby], archbishop of York and papal legate, to the chapter of York; the archbishop having lately directed letters to them about the appropriation of the church of Hemingbrough to the prior & convent of Durham (see 1.3.Archiep.2 ), it appeared from their certificate of consent (1.3.Archiep.2), brought to him by a monk of Durham, that an annual pension of £10, 10 marks to the archbishop and 5 marks to the chapter, should be reserved; but it appears to the king and his council, at whose instance the archbishop has consented to the appropriation, that in view of the fact that the fruits of the church during vacancies belong to the prior & convent by prescriptive custom the archbishop and church of York lose nothing and such a pension would be excessive; and the archbishop, provided the chapter consent, therefore limits the pension to 100s., 5 marks to himself & his successors and 2½ marks to the chapter, and asks the chapter to consider this and quickly send their answer.
