Contents
The records detail the administration of the college through the minutes of its council - an incomplete series - the files of its bursars and especially their accounts, with good series of student and high table battels for the 19th and 20th centuries. Apart from the details of students to be found in those, admission registers and later student files (closed for the lifetime of students) also provide information on members of the college. The accounts, and especially supporting bills, give much detail on the college's maintenance of its historic residence, and also its custody of the also highly significant Lumley Castle. The activities of the various student bodies and clubs, especially the JCR, are well represented and there is also a sequence of photographs of various college and sporting groups, many of the latter from the period before and after the 1st World War. These are supplemented by material which has come in from former members of the college, which has also added some less expected aspects to the archive, such as a photograph album of an African hunting trip.

The founders of the university considered a residential college as an integral part of their scheme from the beginning. So the first students in 1833 were housed in the Archdeacon's Inn on Palace Green. In 1837 the bishop of Durham made over his Durham castle residence to the university and the college was established there. It took time for the university, or administration and teaching, and college, or residential, functions to be distinguished. The castle gradually became established as “University College”, a body of students and teachers living in community, developing distinctive features and traditions, though it has not been a separate corporate body apart from the university.

Charles Thorp, as warden of the university, initially had charge, until a separate master of the college was appointed after 1862. The college also had a vice-master, censor, (responsible for discipline, latterly a senior tutor), bursar and chaplain, with gyps looking after the students’ needs, overseen by a butler.

Further colleges were founded in Hatfield Hall in 1846 and Cosin's Hall in 1851, both with the intention of providing cheaper alternatives for student collegiate residence. The latter took over the Archdeacon's Inn in 1856 but only lasted as an independent entity until 1864 when it was effectively absorbed by University College, where its students had been taking their meals for a while anyway. Such records as survive for Cosin's Hall are thus part of University College's archive. Hatfield also came under University College administration for domestic purposes from 1926 and, when it had to evacuate its buildings during the 2nd World War, it shared all facilities, a governing body and master with University College from 1940 to 1949. So University College's records contain much material about Hatfield and its students during this period.

To ease the pressure on its accommodation, University College also took over Lumley Castle near Chester-le-Street in 1946. This was run by the vice-master with its own JCR.
It necessitated detailed transport arrangements to and from Durham until the castle was returned to the earl of Scarborough in 1970.

Low Table ledgers containing students' debit and credit accounts, including batters and other sums due for such as laundry, repairs and tuition fees. The volumes are generally organised as annual accounts for each student, with some cross-referencing to the next volume, especially in the early volumes which also generally have indexes of students. However, in the 1870s and early 1880s, accounts for all of a student's time are recorded together, hence the date overlaps of these volumes.
There are four separate sequences of these volumes, each lettered, with a volume J [1847-1848] of the second series being missing since at least 1972. The lettering is retained in the present numbering sequence.

Vice-Master/Lumley Castle
UND/F1/C4  1945 - 1961
These records are the files of two vice-masters: first, Leonard Slater, who kept his files well-ordered and numbered, and then William A. Prowse, who was not so assiduous. Their files cover the initial fitting out of Lumley Castle for student accommodation and then its maintenance as such, the staff employed there, the frequent use of the building for courses and visits during vacations and the administration of the student population. There are also files from Prowse's time as a member of the college's governing body.

_Biographical information:_ The vice-master of the college had charge of Lumley Castle after the college's takeover of the castle to provide extra student accommodation from 1946. The considerable ongoing maintenance costs meant that Lumley was a drain on the college's finances and the arrangement with the earl of Scarbrough was ended in the summer of 1970 when the college's students were reunited around Palace Green.

_Ownership history:_ Slater formerly numbered his files (A4-12) as 1LC (for building matters) or 2LCS (for student affairs) and then a letter code; Prowse did not.

Photographs
UND/F1/F 1860 - 2005
The photographs comprise formal college and sporting groups, and also some individuals and events. The images are mostly from the 2 decades before and the decade after the First World War and record the college's success in inter-collegiate sport within the university. They are by no means an annual record of the teams/crews that represented the college in the various sports at this time. The groups are generally posed with their trophies outside in either the Great Court or the fellows' garden, often dressed appropriately for their sport, and so they provide an indication of changing student fashion, and also to some extent the development of the gardens around the college. Most of the photographs are the work of John R. Edis and have been mounted, titled and, apart from the full college groups, have individuals identified. Most were previously framed but all are now frameless.

College groups
UND/F1/FA 1897 - 2005
Annual photographs of the assembled college, both senior and junior members, and also annual photographs of the students and senior members living at Lumley castle, and occasional photographs of freshers. Some of the photographs are copies or print-outs of scanned images or originals held by Castlemen as a result of a campaign in 2000 to build up the college's holdings of such photographs.

G.M. MacFarlane Grieve photograph collection
UND/F1/H1  1912 - 1914
A collection of images of a student's recreational activities as a member of University College in Durham just before the First World War. Most of the collection features rowing on the Wear, especially the various university events such as the Senate Cup and Trial Fours, also the annual varsity race with Edinburgh University. Images of the Henley royal regatta also feature prominently, though no Durham crews are recorded. There are some other University College and Durham Colleges sporting groups and events, some views of Durham and environs, especially the Wear in flood, a series of images from O.T.C. camp, and a few more relaxed images of contemporaries at Durham along with a small collection of probably artistic shots.
Size: 80 x 105mm
194 glass plate negatives

Biographical information: Gavin Malcolm Macfarlane Grieve, the younger brother of A.A. Macfarlane Grieve, was a student at University College Durham from 1913 to 1916, graduating with a BA (litt. ant.) which he took on 12 December 1916. He served in the 1st Royal Highlanders at home in 1915 and then with the 3rd Royal Highlanders in France in 1916 when he was wounded and returned home to serve in the No.2 Officers Cadet Battalion from 1917 to 1919.

Series A-E had been individually numbered and put into envelopes with titles on the envelopes and separate lists of the images in A and C, all possibly done by Macfarlane Grieve. These lists and the numbering show that some images have not survived, but their numbering has been retained, albeit with the letter and number inverted. There were also 2 boxes of unnumbered and unidentified images of not obviously Durham material; some may be family but most seem to have been taken more as artistic and compositional studies. These have now been numbered as series F and G.

K.B. Gibson papers
UND/F1/H3 1935 - 1938 & 1945
This small collection comprises notes and correspondence of K.B. Gibson principally in his role as president of the Durham Union Society, preparing speeches and soliciting speakers for debates. There are also other items, mostly from his time at Durham. He had also retained term cards, group photographs, programmes, posters, pamphlets and even stationery from the various organisations he was involved with in Durham; these have been placed with the records of those organisations. His college blazer and scarf also survive, with the blazer pockets still retaining their contents from when he wore it as a student.

Biographical information: K.B. Gibson (scholar of University College 1934-1938, BA Hons. and D.Th.P.T.) won a classics scholarship from Hymers College Hull and gained a II.1 in his classics finals, also winning the University Classical Scholarship. He was paramount in college and university life, being Senior Man and secretary/president of the Literary and Debating Society, Philosophic and Scientific Society, Read and Weed Club in the former, and secretary and president of the Union, president of the Students' Representative Council and president of the Conservative Association in the latter. He also captained the Durham Colleges Cross Country Club and was vice-chairman of the Federation of University Conservative and Unionist Associations. After Durham, he pursued a teaching career, interrupted by wartime service in the R.A.F. 1940-1945. He taught at Barnard Castle School before the war and was for many years headmaster of Farnsworth School, Bolton, after the war.

Biographical information: Dr Adrian Howard (1950-2008, Castle 1968-1971, Mathematics and Physics) maintained an interest in mathematics throughout his adult life, spent mostly in the Netherlands, and his subsequent studies as a theologian. During the last months of his life, he worked on his mathematical notes, coming up with some new ideas about resolving some perennial mathematical problems. Included with the notes is a commentary by Prof Vernon Armitage.

Provenance: Passed on by Howard's sister to his friend and contemporary M. David Mehers (Castle 1968-1972, Physics), who passed them on to his old college; after consultation with mathematicians by Prof Maurice Tucker, the papers were added to the Castle's archive, and received at Palace Green Library on 4 March 2009, Acc No Misc.2008/9:85.

Proofs for four mathematical problems drawn from the theory of Diophantine Equations, as described in C.H. Hardy and E.M. Wright, The Theory of Numbers (2nd ed, Oxford, 1945), chapter XIII:
1. A simple algorithm for obtaining all Pythagorean triples (whole number solutions of $x^2 + y^2 = z^2$).
2. A solution to Catalan’s equation for $x^2 - y^3 = 1$.
3. A short solution to $x^3 + y^3 \neq z^3$ for all integer values of $z, y, x > 0$.
4. A short solution to Fermat’s last theorem that $x^n + y^n \neq z^n$, for all $n > 2$ and for all whole number values of $z, y, x > 0$.
