Contents

The Haswell deeds are a collection of 118 charters and other legal instruments deposited at Durham Cathedral Priory by the Claxton family sometime after 1457 (the date of the latest deed). This figure includes seven duplicated texts, some of which are the counterparts to chirographs of which both parts survive in the collection (nos. 13A, 13B; 17A, 17B; 21A, 21B; 25B, 25C; 38A, 38B; 65A, 65B; 96A, 96B). At three points the existing numbering of the deeds pairs documents that are not in fact duplicates: no. 25A is not a duplicate (though nos. 25B and 25C are) nor are nos. 68A, 68B, 76A or 76B.

Though the earliest charter in the collection (no. 1) dates from the late twelfth century, there are only three others datable before c.1300 (nos. 103, 104, 107, all from the mid-thirteenth century). The bulk of the Haswell deeds relate to properties in Haswell and Fallowfield (then regarded as part of Haswell) acquired by the Menville family between 1332 and 1355. These passed into the hands of the Claxton family with the accumulated estates in the late fourteenth century; the collection does not include the deeds that explain this transfer, but it was no doubt the result of the marriage of Isabel, daughter and heir of William Menville, to William Claxton. A smaller number of deeds relate to subsequent acquisitions and settlements by the Claxton family. One document, a transcript of court proceedings, has no perceptible links with anything else in the collection (no. 81).

The Haswell deeds are a detached branch of the large collection of Miscellaneous Charters preserved in the priory archive, and the principles by which they were separated from the main stock were not perfectly consistent; Hasw. 66, for example, is an indented counterpart to Misc. Ch. 6156. The collection is further complemented by the Haswell charters of Finchale Abbey (1.2 Finc. 1-67), which relate to many of the same people and places.
