Contents

Correspondence of Bishop Thomas Walsh, mostly letters to John Talbot, the 16th earl of Shrewsbury, written during Walsh's time as vicar apostolic of the Midland/Central District, relating to the development and administration of the Catholic community there during the 1830s and 1840s. Topics include: the building of the new Oscott College, St Chad's Cathedral in Birmingham, St Barnabas's Cathedral in Nottingham, and St Mary's Cathedral in Derby, the establishment of male and female religious orders in the area, the response of Protestants to these developments, Catholic converts, district finances, the management of the clergy, his opinions of Nicholas Wiseman, and the response of the clergy to the Education Bill.

About the creator

Thomas Walsh was born in London in 1776. Following the death of his Irish Catholic father, he was initially sent by his Protestant mother to be educated at the grammar school at St Albans. However, his uncle, a priest of the London District, managed to obtain his admission to the college of St Omers. Along with his fellow students, he was imprisoned at Dourlens in the aftermath of the French Revolution and then continued his studies at Old Hall Green, where he was confirmed on 19 December 1795. In 1801, Walsh became a secretary to the vicar apostolic of the Midland District, Dr Stapleton. Three years later, he became chaplain to Bishop Milner and a missionary at Longbirch and, the following year, was sent to Sedgley Park School as spiritual father. In 1808 he went to Oscott as vice-president and spiritual father, and later became president there (1818-1826). In April 1826, he succeeded Bishop Milner as vicar apostolic. During his episcopal rule, Walsh commissioned the building of the College of St Mary, Oscott, the two cathedrals of Birmingham and Nottingham, and numerous other churches and religious foundations. In 1848, and much to his disapproval, he was transferred to the London District, although he did not take an active role in this capacity owing to his declining health. He died in London in 1849 and was buried in St Chad's Cathedral, Birmingham.

Provenance

Walsh's letters to the Earl of Shrewsbury were brought together by Rev Michael Sharratt as part of the Old Series of documents in Ushaw College Library. The other letters at the end of the sequence have been added at a later date.
